Minister Tsai Visited the “Digital Innovation Seminar” of AEA in person

With modern technology changes with each passing day, in order to improve the knowledge of directors and chiefs of enforcement officers (of senior levels) of AEA and its branches in the field of science and technology and implement the technology policy of the Ministry of Justice, so as to lay the foundations of the basic concepts and application of generative AI and cryptocurrency among the senior heads of AEA and its branches, the “Digital Innovation Seminar” was held on May 3, with Minister Tsai, Ching-Hsiang attended in person.

Minister Tsai, in his speech, mentioned that in the rapidly changing modern society and the ever-changing trends of science and technology, shall urge AEA to keep up with paces in terms of mindsets and practices by adopting innovative actions and effectively utilizing new technologies to improve administrative efficiency for achieving record high performances repeatedly. Since its establishment 24 years ago, AEA has achieved an enforcement performance of collecting NT$654.4 billion for the national treasury, which is an achievement deserving high recognition thanks to the hard work of all AEA staff. In recent years, AEA has actively cooperated with government policies and made deployment in advance. It has implemented projects on African Swine Fever, epidemic prevention, zero-tolerance for driving under the influence, and fines for failing to yield to pedestrians. The results of the enforcement were excellent, demonstrating the commitment of AEA to fully execute public power and enhance the law-abiding awareness among the general public to fulfill the responsibilities of “legal compliance.” In addition, AEA also utilized technology to promote the “Clairvoyance Project of Foreclosure,” “Drone Aerial Videos,” and “Virtual Reality (VR) Videos” to demonstrate innovative achievements. It also cooperated with the procuratorate in handling the revaluation of confiscated property and other works, creating a new era of horizontal cooperation among agencies under the Ministry of Justice and giving full play to the effects of interdisciplinary cooperation. Minister Tsai also mentioned that AEA staff shall have adequate empathy, adopt lenient enforcement measures such as installment payment, actively and proactively assist obligors in accessing the resources of local governments and social welfare agencies to overcome economic difficulties as soon as possible, and fully implement the core concept of “care for the disadvantaged” of AEA.

The Seminar offered special courses in which lecturers from the Information and Communications Research Institute of the Industrial Technology Research Institute specializing in blockchain financial crime investigation were invited to provide instructions on the technology and administrative enforcement of generative AI-bot and cryptocurrency financial flow tools and tracing practices. All colleagues who participated in the courses benefited significantly, and the Seminar concluded as a great success.
